WHAT HAVE WE LEARNT?

Wow! What a start to the term! The residential, where to start? (Clearly not the weather...) It was brilliant – we all had an amazing time, pupils and staff alike. We were all incredibly impressed by the children – they were supportive, determined, adventurous and worked together as a team throughout. It was a week full of smiles and fun with some of the highlights being the climbing wall, paddleboarding and axe throwing, with so much more besides. It has been a wonderful way to start everyone's final term here at Loose, and we hope everyone enjoyed looking at the photos.

Back to school, and back to lessons, we've started the time with some writing. We've revisited Pandora again, and looked at editing and improving our existing writing now we're nearly a year on. It's always interesting seeing old work and seeing how much progress you've made in the that time, and everyone was quite surprised. We've looked at adding in more detail, further features such as relative clauses, semi-colons and colons or parenthesis, and checking our standard English.

In reading we've started a new book – The Final Year by Matt Goodfellow. A very different style of book, written in prose in the style of poetry on every page, following the journey of a young boy's experience in his final year of primary school. It's already proven a very popular book, with everyone fully invested already in Nate's experiences, family and friendships.

For our maths, we have started a new topic – investigations. We are looking at all sorts of challenging problems and working collaboratively to try and solve them, before presenting our findings. . It has proven to be a very challenging topic so far, but one that brings immense pride when successful!

We are now starting to focus more on our production as well! We know how excited everyone is to get going, and the first groups have started to go in the afternoons to practice their scenes. Please do encourage everyone with speaking lines to learn them at home as quick as possible as it will help with rehearsals. More on this to follow in the coming weeks.

It is a very busy term and we shall do our best to keep everyone up to date with upcoming dates and events, but if you have any questions please do get in contact with your class teacher.
